Semi35
The Next Decade
Glasgow | 26th March 2025

Join us at this one-day event in Glasgow as we consider the technology and business trends which will shape the global semiconductor industry over the next decade. Learn how UK companies are innovating now to create world-class products ready for 2035.

Products for future markets in quantum, photonics, med-tech, sustainability, net zero, space and autonomous mobility.

The next ten years will see significant change through digital transformation, exascale compute, 6G connectivity and at-scale deployment of AI and quantum.

The global semiconductor market is forecast to be $2tn by 2035 driven by these growth end markets and the drive to Net Zero and sustainability.

Hear from startups, scale-ups, international players and researchers how the UK sector is building its place in the future.

With a keen market focus, we will hear from leading companies in the UK as well as internationally how the industry will grow to take on emerging challenges and opportunities in the next decade.

Alongside the conference, the NMI exhibition will showcase the latest products and innovations from across the semiconductor value chain and provide a unique networking opportunity for designers, manufacturers, suppliers and end-users to create valuable business connections. The research institute poster session will also return this year as we aim to highlight leading UK research innovation.

This years topics

- 2035 and the related end markets
- Emerging technologies and the drive toward AI advancement Semiconductors, sustainability, and the pursuit of net-zero emissions
